THE SCIENCE

Undenatured Type II Collagen

Undenatured Type II Collagen has been shown in studies and trials to help the body repair and rebuild joint cartilage – reducing joint pain, increasing joint mobility and flexibility, and promoting long-term joint health. Taken from the chicken's sternum cartilage, Undenatured Type II Collagen supports the immune system in reducing inflammation and restoring cartilage. Extensive research and clinical studies have shown Undenatured Type II Collagen to be both safe and effective in supporting joint health.

Undenatured Type II Collagen is made using little or no heat and very limited processing as this can fundamentally alter the molecular structure of the protein, rendering the collagen ineffective as an immunomodulator.
